Alvina Lee (R) with her husband and brand new TV! Alvina won the TV by filling out a survey at the GRTI booth during the Five Tribes Peace Treaty Celebration on April 11, 2009.

Five Tribes Peace Treaty

Despite the cold rainy conditions of the day, Five Tribes was a great event attended by families.

The GRTI staff arrived close to 8 AM for the parade line up and preparation. There was a constant drizzle and cold winds. The mud was slippery and required driving tactics us desert people don't get to use too often. If you weren't careful, your car could easily have gotten stuck in the mud. Regardless, the GRTI staff that had assembled were determined to go on with the parade and booth.

After the parade GRTI had a booth and gave out free t-shirts when you filled out a survey. All surveys were entered in a free raffle. The prize? A 26" digital flat screen TV.

On Monday morning, GRTI pulled a lucky winner from the pile of surveys received on Saturday. Alvina Lee of District 7 was immediately notified of her win. The following day, GRTI proudly delivered the TV to Alvina and her family.

The raffle was to help promote the digital TV transition. If you require an antenna or rabbit ears to watch your local television programming, you will be required to purchase a converter box by June 12th. Without the converter box, you will only see static. If you have satellite service or cable, you will not be affected by the transition.

GRTI would like to thank District 7 for putting on a great Five Tribes Peace Treaty Celebration. GRTI has participated for many years and through heat, rain and chilly weather always managed to have a fun time!

Congratulations Alvina Lee!

A young girl from Peach Springs danced in the parade.

The first survey takers of the day. Reagan and Sherri Thomas of Komatke with family.
